

In his love for us, God allows us to taste on earth the joys of the world to come. He gives us glimpses of the promised land towards which we are travelling in faith.

Though these experiences are very beautiful, they should not become a preoccupation, for then religion would be degenerate into a search for 'highs'. Too much emphasis on peak experiences, which are by definition rare and unpredictable, narrows the scope of God's influence in our lives, and renders the rest of life religiously unimportant. The religious dimension is always present. And in a strange way, the low moments may be just as enriching as the high ones. 'Was it not necessary that the Christ should suffer and so enter into his glory.'

After that wonderful experience on the mountain Jesus and the apostles had to go back down and resume the journey to Jerusalem. After a peak experience we too have to come down from the 'mountain' and return to the plain or valley, where life goes on in the darkness of faith. True religion does not encourage escape from life, but helps us to commit ourselves more deeply to it. This has been expressed beautifully by Emily Dickinson in a short poem which goes as follows:

*Exhilaration is the breeze that lifts us from the ground, and leaves us in another place whose statement is not found;
Returns us not, but after time
we soberly descend,
a little newer for the term upon enchanted ground.*

A Peak Experience

Experiences influence us much more profoundly than talks and lectures. Even though we may not be able to analyse them, we know they affect us (for good or ill), and continue to do so for years afterwards.

The experience on Mount Tabor had great significance, first of all for Jesus himself. It came at a crucial moment in his public life - at the start of his journey to Jerusalem. He knew that the same fate awaited him there as befell all the prophets, namely, a violent death. Naturally he recoiled from such a fate. In order to reflect on it and pray about it, he climbed to the top of Mount Tabor, taking Peter, James and John with him.

As soon as they reached the top, Jesus began to pray. During his prayer, Moses and Elijah appeared to him and spoke to him about his forthcoming passion. More important, he experienced the presence of God. And he heard again the wonderful words of affirmation he had heard at his Baptism: 'You are my beloved Son; I am pleased with you.'

12th March 2017

On Mount Tabor Jesus felt himself comforted, reassured, affirmed and strengthened for the ordeal ahead. It wasn't that everything became rosy. In fact nothing changed. He still had to face a dark and threatening future. But he knew that somehow it was what God wanted from him, and that God would give him the strength to face it.

But the experience was also of great importance for the three apostles who were with him on the mountain. It confirmed their faith in Jesus and helped them to face that dark future with him.

The Tabor experience could be called 'a peak experience'. We too can have peak experiences or moments of transfiguration. We can have intense experiences of light, peace, unity, joy, exhilaration, meaning... and of the presence of God. These are true moments of grace which can be triggered off not only by prayer, but by poetry, music, nature... but they are more likely to be the fruit of suffering and painful struggle.

Gluten Intolerance - The Chalice is offered at Sunday Masses but this is only for those who are gluten intolerant. When approaching the Priest at Communion time please indicate that you have an intolerance to gluten and he will offer you the Chalice. We would ask parishioners who have received the host not to ask for the Chalice because even the merest hint of gluten in the Chalice can cause a severe reaction to someone who is intolerant to gluten.
