

ahead with their mission.

And so it is with us. When we set out on a journey we are not absolutely sure where it will lead us. There may be surprises along the way. We may end up taking diversions. Some roads may be smooth and straight, others narrow and full of potholes. But we need to be confident that the journey is worthwhile and that the ultimate destination will be well worth the effort.

Blessed John Henry Newman once wrote a homily entitled

“The Ventures of Faith.” He said the following:

“In various ways, the circumstances of the times cause [people] at certain seasons to take this path or that, for religion's sake. They know not where they are being carried; they see not the end of their course; they know no more than this, that it is right to do what they are now doing; and they hear a whisper within them, which assures them that whatever their present conduct involves in time to come, they shall, through God's grace, be equal to it.”

Newman had a great journey of conversion in his life from the Church of England to Catholicism. He had many twists and turns on this journey but always believed that the “kindly light” of God would lead him to the truth. I think his words give us courage and confidence today. He says when we pursue our journey of faith, we know it is right to do and we hear a whisper within us which assures us that we will be able for the challenges ahead, with God’s grace. Let us pray that, as we reflect on our own calling as Christians, we will be enlightened to take the path that God has chosen for us by the grace of the Holy Spirit as we continue our own journey of faith.

The Concept of Freewill

In our Gospel reading today, Jesus emphasises the concept of freewill. We are free to either accept or reject the message of the Gospel. He sets the following criteria for accepting the message of the Gospel: “If any place” (i) Does not welcome you OR (ii) People refuse to listen to you, then he advises his disciples to move on elsewhere and shake the dust from their feet as they do so.

Jesus is not calling for an immediate or complete conversion. He realises that this may take time. Instead, he is expecting people to show an openness to the message of the Gospel. Crucially, he asks that they listen to what the disciples have to say. In our busy lives (not least my own!) how often do we allow time to listen to Jesus whether this is by reading his word, listening to people of faith or through prayer. Often the words of Jesus can become obscured by the noise and busyness of the soundtrack of our lives.

Many people associate the ministry of the apostles as commencing in the time after Pentecost. But, from this Gospel reading, we can see that it commenced a lot earlier than that. We are told that Jesus sent them out “in pairs” and “gave them authority”. The disciples responded positively to this request from Jesus: “they set off to preach repentance and they cast out many devils, and anointed many sick people with oil and cured them.”

Often the response that we make to the call of Jesus can lead us off in unexpected directions. The disciples can never have imagined where this call would lead them but they were prepared to trust Jesus and go
