

number of really committed Christians. As a preface for the Mass reminds us, Christ “never leaves his flock untended.”

Each and every one of us has a duty and responsibility to share our faith with others. It should not, as the Gospel says, be hidden away. Of course, each of our lives and our circumstances are different. But whether we are at work, at home or at school, there are many ways that we can respond to our Gospel calling by reaching out to others and helping those in need. St. Vincent de Paul once said “Do whatever good lies at your hands” and St. Teresa of Calcutta often encouraged people to find Calcutta in their own communities.

As Church, I think we can only move forward together in the coming years by working collaboratively as lay people, catechists, youth workers, priests, sisters and deacons as we try to respond to the call of the Gospel in our times.

In our Gospel today, Jesus says:

“Do not imagine that I have come to abolish the Law or the Prophets. I have come not to abolish but to complete them. I tell you solemnly, till heaven and earth disappear, not one dot, not one little stroke, shall disappear from the Law until its purpose is achieved.”

Father Kieran O’Mahony makes the following point: “The Sermon on the Mount has entered world literature as a great synthesis of the teaching of Jesus. In today’s reading from the Sermon, Jesus teaches a morality of the heart, that goes well beyond our eternal actions to the heart, the inner “sanctum” from which our actions spring. It is very searching and, as we know, very true.”

Writing about today’s Gospel, Father Donal Neary says the following:

“Jesus asks for forgiveness and reconciliation when he speaks about leaving a gift at the altar to go for reconciliation. He commends marriage, and faithfulness in marriage, in his views on divorce. This collection of Jesus’ sayings form a background to how he lived his life himself.”

Back in 2016, Pope Francis said: “It is not enough to just respect the commandments and do nothing more. Christian life is not just an ethical life: it is an encounter with Jesus Christ”.

Let us pray for the grace to put this into practice in our own lives and ministry in the week ahead.

“How can we sing the song of the Lord on alien soil?”

16th February 2020

I am reading a book at the moment called Pastoral Ministry in Changing Times by Father Aidan Ryan which was published by Messenger Publications last year. It focuses on the current position of the Church in Ireland in the challenging times that we all live in.

Father Aidan quotes from psalm 137 and asks, “How can we sing the song of the Lord on alien soil?” In a way, he is asking how we can share the joy of the gospel authentically in the world that we live in today which is perhaps more hostile to the message than may have been the case for previous generations.

We can already see from the recent general election results a certain volatility and unpredictability in the electorate which went the way of the Labour Party in the past but has now gone in the direction of Sinn Fein.

“There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune.” I thought of these words from Shakespeare’s play Julius Caesar in the context of the election as the tide goes in and out for various political parties.

There are certainly challenges for the Church in our world today not least to interpret the signs of the times through the light of the gospel in a society that has changed immeasurably in recent decades. It is important to offer an authentic witness to the faith that will encourage others with the Christian life.

God gives us grace which is sufficient for our needs and the tasks he gives us to do. As Church, we can only move forward together by sharing our gifts in different forms of ministry. As Pope Benedict said, we are all co-responsible for the task of spreading the gospel in our times.

There was never a golden age of Christianity. Every age brought it’s own challenges for people of faith and the Holy Spirit has always found a way through. In every time, there are only a certain
