The Beatitudes

In today's Gospel from Saint Matthew, Jesus gives us some very important advice. The Beatitudes have been described as a template for Christian living or as a picture of what Jesus himself was like as a person. They are part of the Sermon on the Mount is the first of five great discourses in Matthew's Gospel. They are also found in the Gospel of Saint Luke (Luke 6:20-26). They go to the very centre of our lives as Christians and invite us to follow a way of life that may not always come naturally to us. We may reflect on the Beatitudes if we have time in the coming week and see what God may be saying to us.

In the Beatitudes, Jesus said "Blessed are the pure in heart, they shall see God". It's the people whose hearts are turned towards God that he especially appreciates. The blessings in the Beatitudes are primarily future blessings but there can be an anticipation of the blessings in the present. They turn the expectations of our current society on their head and tell us that it is the meek, the merciful, the gentle and the pure in heart who are most pleasing to God. As Saint Bernard, said "the merciful reach out to others in compassion and identify with them in love." The Beatitudes also reveal that those who mourn will be comforted.

The words or the Beatitudes which refer to those who "hunger and thirst for what is right" well describe people who work for diligently and persistently for social justice in our community.

The Beatitudes have been described as a charter for Christian living. It appears to be counter cultural in our world today as they turn many of today's values on their head. They go to the very centre of our lives as Christians and invite us to follow a way of life that may not come naturally to us. However, the very words that Jesus uses here “gentle”, “merciful”, “pure in heart”, “peacemaker”. Jesus also challenges us by referring to those who “hunger and thirst for what is right”. An acknowledgment, perhaps, that we are sometimes called to look outside of our families and homes to bring the Christian message to those in most need wherever we may encounter them, especially during the winter months.

Archbishop Farrell recently spoke about the challenge of making a convincing case for the catholic faith, a life of virtue and a just society. He said that the person of faith reads the world through the lens of the Word of God. Reading the Beatitudes today provides us with such a lens. It allows us to see the message of the gospel through the eyes of faith. They challenge us to bring out the very best of ourselves.

Pope Francis proposed Six New Beatitudes in Malmo, Sweden in 2016:

- ◆ Blessed are those who remain faithful while enduring evils inflicted on them by others and forgive them from their heart.
- ◆ Blessed are those who look into the eyes of the abandoned and marginalised and show them their closeness.
- ◆ Blessed are those who see God in every person and strive to make others also discover him.
- ◆ Blessed are those who protect and care for our common home.
- ◆ Blessed are those who renounce their own comfort in order to help others.
- ◆ Blessed are those who pray and work for full communion between Christians.

Next Wednesday February 1st is the first day of our Celtic Springtime and the following Monday February 6th will become a Bank Holiday in Ireland for the first time to celebrate St. Brigid’s Day. We are already beginning to see the first signs of the season as the new flowers are starting to appear in our parks and gardens. As the song says: “I’ve always loved springtime, the passing of winter. The green of the new leaves and life going on”.

We pray as well for a new Springtime in our Church as we continue to journey with the Building Hope programme in our Archdiocese. May the coming months be a time of new life and hope in our church as we continue to find news ways to minister together and share the Good news of the Gospel with those who are most in need.

Gerard Reilly - Permanent Deacon in Malahide and Portmarnock parishes.
