

and fully human. It was because he was fully divine, a full image of God, that he was also fully human. The more Christ grows within us, the more human we become – the more we become the person that God has created us to be.

A good Advent question to ask is, 'Who would I like to become this Advent, so as to make Christmas special for others?'

We may be tempted to think that 'I am who I am and I am not going to become anyone else, I am not going to change.' Yet, God is always calling us to grow into his Son. God never ceases to call us to change. God is patient with us when we appear to be deaf to that call. God waits patiently on us to admit Christ more fully into our lives. God's waiting on us is not a passive waiting, a kind of standing back to wait and see. God's patient waiting is expressed actively. God sends us messengers to help us to create space in our lives for Christ to come and grow within us. God is actively involved in helping us to prepare a way for the Lord. God's messengers, God's help, can take many and varied forms. Advent is a time to become more alert to the resources that God offers us to grow into the person of Christ.

Prayers for the second week of Advent:

God's Word:

'Be patient, therefore, beloved,
until the coming of the Lord.

The farmer waits for the precious crop from the earth, being patient with it until it receives the early and the late rains.

You also must be patient. Strengthen your hearts, for the coming of the Lord is near'. From the letter of St. James 5,7-8

Jesus, love of all loving, in the ploughed-up earth of our lives you come to plant the trusting of faith.

A small seed at first, faith can grow and keep alive
the inexhaustible goodness of a human heart.

[we pray for all those we carry in our hearts and our intentions]

Bless us, Christ Jesus; in you our hearts find peace

Second Sunday of Advent

At this time of year we think about buying Christmas presents for people. We may be at the stage of asking people what they would like for Christmas. People may already have been asking us the same question, and we might have found ourselves wondering, 'What do I want for Christmas?'

This second Sunday of Advent might prompt us to ask a deeper question of ourselves, 'What does God want for me, for us, this season of Advent?' If we were to put that question to John the Baptist who appears in today's Gospel reading, 'What does God want of us?', he would likely say back to us, 'Prepare a way for the Lord.' He would say to us, 'What God wants for you this Advent is that you make way for the coming of God's Son, that you receive him more fully into your lives.' That is the fundamental call of Advent, 'Receive the Lord who is coming.' That primary call of Advent is matched by the primary prayer of Advent, 'Come, Lord Jesus.' In praying that prayer, we are expressing our desire to receive the Lord more fully into our lives, to grow in our relationship with him.

Advent is a season when we are called to allow Christ to grow in us. The great saint of Advent, apart from John the Baptist, is Mary. Mary's Advent was that nine month period when Jesus physically grew within her, until she was ready to offer him to the world. Our Advent is much shorter than Mary's, four weeks in all, but it is also the time when we are called to allow Jesus to grow spiritually within us, so that we can offer him to the world by the lives that we live. The call to allow Jesus to grow within us may first be heard as a call to repent, which is the call that John the Baptist makes in today's Gospel reading. To repent is to turn away from what is not of the Lord and to turn towards what is of the Lord. If the Lord is to grow within us, there will always be something that we have to turn away from or let go of. Advent invites us to look at what there might be in our lives that is blocking Christ from growing in us.

4th December 2016

There is a lot of emphasis today on personal growth and personal development. People, quite rightly, want to live full lives. As Christians, however, we believe that we grow as persons to the extent that Christ grows within us. Jesus was both fully divine
